THE TRUTH ABOUT THANKSGIVING

William B. Newell, a Penobscot Indian and former chairman of the Anthropology department at the University of Connecticut, says that the first official Thanksgiving Day celebrated the massacre of 700 Indian men, women and children during one of their religious ceremonies.

"Thanksgiving Day" was first proclaimed by the Governor of the then Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1637 to commemorate the massacre of 700 men, women and children who were celebrating their annual Green Corn Dance (Feast of Tabernacles) .

Governor John Winthrop proclaimed an official "Day of Thanksgiving" in 1637 to celebrate the return of men from the Pequot War in Mystic, Connecticut, in which colonists allied with Mohegan and Narragansett tribes to defeat the Pequot.

More than 700 Pequot women, children, and men died in the war, which were massacred. In 1863, during the American Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln authorized that the fourth Thursday of November be set aside to give thanks and praise for the nation's blessings. Thanksgiving became part of American culture.

Andrew Jackson: Indian-Killer

Andrew Jackson: A man nicknamed “Indian killer” and “Sharp Knife” surely deserves the top spot on a list of worst U.S. Presidents. Andrew Jackson “was a forceful proponent of the Indian Removal Act in May 28, 1830, which became law. the Cherokee nation was forced to give up its lands east of the Mississippi River and to migrate to an area in present-day Oklahoma. The Cherokee people called this journey the “Trail of Tears,” because of its devastating effects. Others have a less genteel way of describing the seventh president of the United States. Jackson, also a slave owner, had a wall in the white house with the skin of native Americans draped on it. He created leather from native Americans largely gathered from tribes which had peaceful relations with the US government before he decided he wanted the land owned by Spain in the south

Colonel John Chivington

Before Chivington and his men left the area, they plundered the tipis and took the horses. After the smoke cleared, Chivington's men came back and killed many of the wounded. They dressed their weapons, hats and gear with scalps and other body parts, including human fetuses and male and female genitalia.

Lt Colonel Custer

Custer was the Hitler of the Plains. His cavalry murdered, pilaged and raped their way across Indian country in the late 1800s while he sat in the saddle and orchestrated the entire scene. His troopers made coin purses from the scrotums of Indian men and ornaments for their saddle horns out of the vaginas of Indian women.
